Abstract

Method and apparatus for processing image data.

A method of representing a data distribution derived from an object or image by processing signals corresponding to the object or image comprising deriving an approximate representation of the data distribution and analysing the errors of the data elements when expressed in terms of the approximate representation.

Fig. 5